

Transitions in leadership

Cliff Taylor

December 2025

HBR survey

83% of 142 senior HR professionals agreed:

"Transitions into significant new roles are the most challenging times in the professional lives of managers."

Need to understand:

- Context of new role, and
- Adapt to that reality

Typical Corporate Leadership Path

Individual Contributor

Step 1: First Line Manager

Step 2: Mid-Level Leader

Step 3: Business Unit Leader

Step 4: Senior Executive

Step 5: Chief Executive

- Transitioning from Individual Contributor to First Line Manager

Step 1: Individual Contributor to First-Line Manager

Increase	Decrease
+ Take charge and give direction	- Need to be socially accepted
+ Look towards the future and anticipate issues	- Consideration of others' thoughts and feelings*
+ Willing to depend on others	- Attention to daily details
+ Seek competitive situations

Based on research by PDI

*does not mean be heartless, but be objective how you take these into account

- Transitioning from First Line Manager to Manager of Managers / Manager of Function or Business Unit

Experiences that may differentiate mid-level leaders from first-line leaders

- Difficult staffing situations
- Financial management experience
- Interpersonally challenging experiences
- Managing a function
- Dealing with inherited problems and challenges

Step 2: First-Line Manager to Mid-Level Leader

Increase	Decrease
+ Continue to be more competitive	- Attention to daily details
+ Continue to rely on others, and let them work independently
+ Continue to take charge and give direction, plus adopt a more direct communication style
+ Continue to be future-oriented
+ Be willing to lead and take risks
+ Identify trends and themes in information
+ Desire to perform well and be promoted
+ Tolerate high expenditures of energy
+ Act independently and autonomously	8
+ Ability to persuade and negotiate

INTERNATIONAL BRANDING EXPERT AND COACH

- You already have a brand!
- It is what people say about you when you are not there
- Find out what it is
- If you don't like it, change it through your actions

When I was at Company X...

- No-one really cares about your past roles so don't talk about them specifically.
- Everyone assumes you are competent so get on with what you are good at.
- The difference is how you go about establishing yourself in a new organisation – which is building relationships.

Step 3: Mid-Level Leader to Business Unit Leader

Increase	Decrease
+ Continue to be willing to lead and take risks	- None
+ Continue to identify trends and themes in information
+ Continue to be future-oriented
+ Continue to tolerate high expenditures of energy
+ Continue to persuade and negotiate
+ Continue to communicate directly, and be more honest and straightforward
+ Continue to let others work independently
+ Have a positive outlook on the future
+ Weigh new data and alternatives before making a decision
+ Generate new ideas
+ Possess an aptitude for change and being flexible

Experiences that differentiate business unit leaders from mid-level leaders

Strategy development

Highly visible or critical assignments

High-risk situations

Critical negotiations

External relations

Common denominator: less discretionary time

Managing Your Energy

It takes energy to do everything!

Make sure you build your energy by paying attention to the following five areas:

- Sleep
- Exercise
- Nutrition & Hydration
- Meditation / Deep breathing
- Personal relationships

what is it?
is it actionable?

multiple steps?
it's a project
what's the desired outcome?

plan the project (review for actions)

what's the next action?

eliminate

- trash
- recycle

incubate

- someday/maybe
- tickler list / review folder reference

- paper / digital files and folders (retrievable)

→ do it

- if less than 2 minutes

→ delegate it

- track in "waiting for"

→ defer it

- calendar
- next action lists
- tickler file

A close-up photograph of numerous star-shaped cutouts on a dark grey surface. Most stars are silver or grey, but several in the foreground are a bright, metallic yellow. The stars are scattered and some are overlapping, creating a sense of depth and texture.

What situation are you taking on?

Think STARS:

S = Start-up

T = Turnaround

A = Accelerated growth

R = Realignment

S = Sustaining success

Your first 100 days

1) organize & learn about the business

2) fix high A-item priorities

3) define strategy & start

4) get the leadership team in place fast

5) identify where you can bring early wins

6) create enabling alliances

Step 4: Business Unit Leader to Senior Executive

Increase	Decrease
+ Continue to tolerate high expenditures of energy	- Attention to daily details
+ Continue to be willing to lead and take risks	- Try to keep other people happy
+ Continue to persuade and negotiate	- Act independently and autonomously
+ Continue to weigh new data and alternatives before making a decision	- Demonstrate open-mindedness and acceptance of other's different values
+ Continue to be future-oriented
+ Continue to communicate directly, and be more honest and straightforward
+ Continue to let others work independently
+ Desire to perform well and be promoted
+ Seek competitive situations
+ Ability to remain calm in stressful situations
+ Places value on following the rules
